RESEARCH INTERESTS

- Topical Authoritarian politics; information manipulation; Chinese politics and foreign policy; nationalist public opinion; state-journalist relations; global media
- Methodological Computational text analysis; interviews; statistical inference; experiments

WORK EXPERIENCE

---

My research is focused on information manipulation (including censorship, propaganda, and disinformation) in and by authoritarian states. My interest in these issues is informed by a decade-long career in journalism and public affairs. Eight of those years were spent with Singaporean public broadcaster Channel NewsAsia, which is one of the largest English-language news networks in Asia. In my last journalistic role, I ran the broadcaster's Shanghai bureau, where I covered the annual political meetings in Beijing, anti-government protests in Hong Kong in 2019, and Taiwan elections in 2020.

PUBLICATIONS

- Foreign Correspondence in China: Authoritarian Media Control and Journalistic Responses. 2025. The International Journal of Press/Politics. [DOI: <https://doi.org/10.1177/19401612251379585>]
- The Use of “So-Called” as a Propaganda Device. 2025. The Journal of East Asian Studies. (with Alexander Dukalskis). [DOI: <https://doi.org/10.1017/jea.2025.7>]
  - This paper, which touches on delegitimising rhetoric against rights defenders in China, gained traction among human rights practitioners: it was cited by the UK non-profit Index on Censorship and promoted on X (18,000+ views) by leading international human rights lawyer Caoilfhionn Gallagher KC, counsel to jailed publisher Jimmy Lai.
